BLIZZARD FOLLOWS SEVERE RAIN, WIND STORM IN MID-WEST

Wind And Rain In Southwestern Ohio And Wind
And Ice In North Wreak Heavy Damage Toll;
Snow Comes In Wake Of Wind And Rain

(Special to the Gazette)

Property damage, amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars, was reported from many Ohio communities as the result of a severe electrical storm which thundered across the state early today.

Lightning, rain, snow, sleet and high winds formed a fierce combination which spent most of its fury upon the northern part of the state. The central and southern portions of Ohio felt the storm less severely.

It was an odd electrical disturbance in that temperatures were only a few degrees above freezing. Snow covered the ground along Lake Erie.

Lightning struck several places in Cleveland, but the actual damage was small.

Airplane traffic was halted for several hours because of the danger of ice forming on the wings of planes.

A heavy rain gave the northwestern part of the state its most serious "ice storm" since 1928, when the district was heavily damaged. Ice formed on trees, electric wires and highways with such thickness that communication and traffic were disrupted in the vicinity of Sandusky and Newark.

Service on the Lake Shore Electric Traction line was suspended because of ice on the trolley wires. Telephone lines between Norwalk and Sandusky were out of commission and repair crews were busy restoring service.

Highways in that section were littered with tree branches which snapped under the weight of ice. Other limbs drooped so low over the roads that traffic was further hampered.

AUTOIST KILLED

In Lorain Baird Truxell, 36, was killed when, blinded by a heavy rain, he drove his automobile into a traffic stanchion. Streets were flooded and service on Lorain street car lines was halted for several hours.

Radio stations WTAM and WHK at Cleveland were forced to stop their broadcasts last night when wires from the studios to the stations were broken.

In Hamilton and nearby southwestern Ohio cities, houses were unroofed and buildings damaged, wires were torn down and small buildings were upset by the wind. Early estimates placed the damage at more than $200,000.

HAMILTON HARD HIT

Six persons were known to have been injured, none seriously. Mrs. Adelia Hill and Clarence Wynn, 13, were cut by flying glass. John Calahan, his wife and two small children also were injured.

The Miami Model Laundry at Hamilton was damaged by fire. St. Peter's Catholic Church also was damaged.

Strong winds broke plate glass windows in Youngstown. Signs were torn down and other minor damage wrought.

The high wind struck harder in the business section of Middletown than in the suburbs, causing damage estimated conservatively at $15,000 to $20,000.

Many plate glass windows were shattered and signs ripped off their moorings. The Carl Weber

Convict Indian of Student's Murder

GLOBE, Ariz., March 22—Golyn Mac Seymour, Apache Indian youth, today faced life imprisonment for the death of Henrietta Schmerler, Columbia University student on his conviction of first degree murder with a recommendation for clemency.

After six hours deliberation, a jury in federal court found him guilty last night of slaying Miss Schmerler. In declining to bring an unrecommended verdict the jurors apparently believed the defense's contention that Seymour thought himself invited to intimacy with the girl and killed her during a struggle which followed his attack.

Unless a stay is obtained, Judge Albert S. Simes will sentence Seymour today.

The government had sought a hanging verdict.

FINED SALOON KEEPER

CLEVELAND, O., March 22.—James Miletton, 32, today was fined $100 and costs when arraigned on a charge of operating a "five cents a drink" saloon.

ENDS LIFE SHORTLY
AFTER SON DIES

CLEVELAND, O., March 22.—Michael Langsham, 65, wealthy Lorain, O., clothing merchant, ended his life by shooting himself with a pistol in the home of his son, Dr. Charles B. Langsham, in Shaker Heights, a suburb, just after his son had died of pneumonia, according to police.

Mr. Langsham and another son, Isaac, came to Cleveland early today after learning that Dr. Langsham was critically ill at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

The father and brother were at the bedside when Dr. Langsham died. They returned to the Shaker Heights home with the physician's widow. A few minutes later a shot sounded in the parlor. Mr. Langsham's body, with a bullet in the head, was found slumped in a chair.

MAN ENDS LIFE

VAN WERT, O., March 22—William F. Schuster, 44, was found dead in his bed with a bullet wound in his temple. A verdict of suicide was given by Dr. W. E. Beach, coroner. Schuster was the owner of a taxi service in Van Wert.

NEWSPAPER AD TAKEN AS HINT TO LINDBERGH

Indicates Colonel Has Heard From
Kidnappers

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 22.—A classified "personal" ad published in New York today hinted that Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has received evidence from kidnappers of his baby but all other sources indicated the 22-day search had been futile.

Authorities declined to comment on the ad, apparently one of a series signed "Jafslie" which appeared in the New York American and Bronx Home News.

The ad read:

"Thanks. That little package you sent was immediately delivered and accepted as real article. See my position. Over fifty years in business and can I pay without seeing goods? Common sense makes me trust you. Please understand my position. Jafslie."

This might be interpreted to mean the kidnappers had sent some article to Lindbergh but were being informed he was unwilling to pay the ransom until he "saw the goods" and was convinced he would receive his own child back.

A cold sleet enveloped the desolate Sourland Mountain area today, making the Lindbergh home seem even more isolated than ever. A raw wind howled outside, so Mrs. Lindbergh spent most of her time at the fireside.

Yesterday she was visited by her sisters, the Misses Elizabeth and Constance Morrow. Constance is at home with her mother, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow at Englewood, for the Easter holidays. She is a student at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

The audience walked out of a theater when bricks from a wall dropped through a skylight. The damage to the theater was estimated at $2,000.

Trees were uprooted and telephone and electric wires torn down throughout the city.

KIDNAPED QUEEN ARRIVES TOO LATE

Lovely Mary Butterfield, elected St. Patrick's queen at the University of Missouri, at Columbia, missed out on her scheduled coronation due to a kidnapping prank the night of the ball, given by the college of engineering. She was seized by five students in an automobile as she left her sorority mother in Kansas City house, carried thirty-six miles away, and obliged to pass the time playing bridge until she was taken to the ball too late for the coronation ceremony. She said she couldn't name her five abductors, but could identify them if she saw them again. There is a feud between law and engineering students. Miss Butterfield's mother, in Kansas City, was woken by a heavy downpour of rain.

NEWSPAPER AD TAKEN AS HINT TO LINDBERGH

Indicates Colonel Has Heard From
Kidnappers

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 22.—A classified "personal" ad published in New York today hinted that Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has received evidence from kidnappers of his baby but all other sources indicated the 22-day search had been futile.

Authorities declined to comment on the ad, apparently one of a series signed "Jafslie" which appeared in the New York American and Bronx Home News.

The ad read:

"Thanks. That little package you sent was immediately delivered and accepted as real article. See my position. Over fifty years in business and can I pay without seeing goods? Common sense makes me trust you. Please understand my position. Jafslie."

This might be interpreted to mean the kidnappers had sent some article to Lindbergh but were being informed he was unwilling to pay the ransom until he "saw the goods" and was convinced he would receive his own child back.

A cold sheet enveloped the desolate Sourland Mountain area today, making the Lindbergh home seem even more isolated than ever. A raw wind howled outside, so Mrs. Lindbergh spent most of her time at the fire-side.

Yesterday she was visited by her sisters, the Misses Elizabeth and Constance Morrow. Constance was at home with her mother, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow at Englewood, for the Easter holidays. She is a student at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

All clues developed yesterday were found valueless, but investigation of one was not yet complete. It is the message found on a carrier pigeon in Connecticut, and decoded by a "local bootlegger" as reading:

"All lines unsafe. Kid in yacht. Making no port. Well trained care outside United States jurisdiction. Return bird."

It was learned the pigeon carried a 1930 registration band, and therefore was being used improperly.

Another carrier pigeon, with a cryptic message signed "Red" was found at East Stroudsburg, Pa., but proved to be a hoax thought up by boys.

A quarrel between the various police agencies working on the various police agencies working on the kidnapping was indicated yesterday when Elmer Hand, chief detective of Hunterdon County, announced the case would be presented to the grand jury April 12. Hand criticized the "stupid barrier" placed about the Lindbergh home by state police and said the baby would not be returned until it had been eliminated.

But Attorney General William A. Stevens, who has charge of the case, contradicted Hand's statement regarding the grand jury.

The questioning of Henry (Red) Johnson, friend of Miss Betty Gow, the kidnapped baby's nurse, by Deputy Police Chief Frank Brex of Newark was regarded of minor significance.

The officers were to ask the Logan County court to hold each of the men on $2,000 bond.

Cleveland Craft was to be charged with the holdup of William Shank of Buenavista, Hocking County, who claimed he was held up and slugged on Sept. 13, 1931.

CHILLICOTHE, O., March 22.—Five Rockbridge men, arrested by Hocking County authorities at Adelphi on a tip that they might know something about the recent Prospect Bank robbery were taken to Logan today to answer various charges. They denied knowledge of the prospect hold up.

The five men were: John Kline, Ben Simmons, John Craft, John Norman and Cleveland Craft.

Deputy Sheriff Ben Routh, assisted by Dr. R. E. Oliver of this city, went to Adelphi to investigate the tip. The men's machine was found to contain guns, ammunition, tear gas shells, tear gas gun and other suspicious equipment. They claimed they had been in Chillicothe to sell chickens.

Four perished as blaze sweeps Texas hotel

DALLAS, Tex., March 22.—Four men were burned to death when fire, fanned by a strong wind, swept the Elm Hotel today. Four other men were seared by the flames.

Approximately fifty residents of the hotel fled in scanty attire and suffered from exposure to freezing weather.

The dead:

W. H. Bodenhammer, cardwriter, Chicago.

Grover Hopson, Sherman, Texas.

A man named Granger, of Chicago.

A man tentatively identified as Frank Fisher, Little Rock, Colo., was severely burned in the fire.

The first alarm was turned in by employees on a South Shore electric train. Peering through the heavy gusts of snow they saw a couple trapped at a second story window. The train was halted and fire companies summoned.

When firemen arrived they rescued the couple, Roy Zink and his wife.

Edward Foster, also trapped in the building jumped to safety from a second story window. He was uninjured.

Fireman Arthur Johnson was injured when a wall overcame him.

SCOUT EXECUTIVE HEARD AT MEETING OF TRAINING CLASS

"Courses in school should fit the boy to take up his life work . . . Scouting is not intended to take the place of the home, church and school in the boy's life . . . Let's stop talking championships and come to standards . . . Work more to the standard and become the winner of one thing" were interesting highlights of a talk given by Charles Wood, deputy regional Scout executive of Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, at the second meeting of the Scout leadership training class at the Scout room, W. Main St., Monday evening.

Mr. Wood also stressed the proper guidance of troop programs and co-ordination of patrols. He also discussed Scouting activities including camparals, summer camps, a Scout circus and hikes every month.

Knot boards were submitted to the class by William Rickels, Dr. R. McClellan, Edward Cornwell, Lawrence Barnes and C. B. Wood. Dr. McClellan's board was given high honors. The meeting closed with the usual Scout ceremony.

A Tenderfoot investiture ceremony will be held at the third meeting of the class Monday evening. A district committee and members of Troop 54 will be in charge of the ceremony.

CLAIMS SUIT FILED WITHOUT AUTHORITY

Injunction suit recently filed in common pleas court at Dayton in the name of Mary Lockwood, 79, of 2608 E. Third St., Dayton, against her nephew, Harry Sutton, Xenia, asking cancellation of a deed she signed and seeking to restrain him from disposing of her residence property, has been ordered dismissed by the plaintiff.

The plaintiff made public a statement in which she maintained the suit was filed by her attorney without her authority, that she had deeded the property in question to her nephew of her own free will and that he had not defrauded her in any way.

WINNING OF SOULS SUBJECT OF SERMON

"How to Win Souls to Christ," was the subject of a sermon delivered by Evangelist F. W. Strong, Ft. Worth, Texas, at revival services, under auspices of the Church of Christ at the Opera House Monday evening. A delegation from Jamestown and many visitors attended the service.

The Rev. G. T. Bateman, pastor of the local church, played a trombone solo at the services and Miss Mattie Wofford, the singing evangelist, who is assisting in the services, sang a solo. The Rev. Mr. Strong's subject Tuesday evening will be, "Christian Duty."

TO TEST SENTIMENT

Sentiment of members of Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion, on the question of whether the rameeting 50 per cent on adjusted compensation certificates should be paid to veterans at once will be determined when a poll of the post is taken at the next monthly meeting April 6, according to Paul Halder, commander. All Ohio Legion posts have been directed to take a vote on the question by Paul Herbert, state commander.

Love and lotteries won't mix—when an international boundary separates them. Miss Angelina Frias of Laredo, Tex., found this out when she dispatched a tender missive to her sweetheart, a radio announcer at Station XED, Reynosa, Mexico. Her love letter came back marked "Fraudulent Mail." The postmaster explained the government had ordered mail addressed to Station XED returned because the station persisted in advertising the Mexican National Lottery by urging United States residents to send dollars for chances. Photos show letters from the post office.

STORM CAUSES HEAVY DAMAGE MONDAY NIGHT

blown out of the tenant house on the premises.

The fine country home of the Earleys was also damaged to some extent. A heavy French west door was blown out and shattered glass hurled through the interior of the residence. Kitchen windows were broken and the wind ripped off a stair door and a panel door in the kitchen.

Thunder and lightning heralded the approach of the storm as it swept into central and eastern cities taking a toll of dead and injured in dozens of accidents.

COLD WEATHER COMES

The blizzard swirled out of the southwest, struck Chicago yesterday and today was centered over the Ohio valley and Great Lakes. Roads were impassable in parts of Iowa, Indiana and Illinois where huge drifts piled up.

Air transportation was hard hit in larger centers. Hundreds of men received employment to keep streets and tracks clear of snow.

Airplane travel out of Chicago including mail schedules was disorganized badly. High winds, low ceiling and lack of visibility grounded virtually all planes. The storm's severity diminished in Chicago today but not until suburban street car systems had been put out of commission. Blocked roads stalled scores of motorists in small towns.

Heavy wind and electrical storms hit the southern edge of the storm area. One was dead and at least six persons injured in lower Indiana. Hundreds of thousands of dollars damage was reported. Several families fled when their homes were destroyed. At Evansville, Ind., a $500,000 furniture factory was wrecked. Heavy damage occurred in the Bedford district.

Similar storms of near tornado proportions struck near Harrisburg in southern Illinois. The high school gymnasium at Carrier Mills, Ill., was destroyed and a dozen houses unroofed by the wind.

A coupe, owned and driven by Miss Lena M. Bales, and also occupied by Miss Frances Johnston, was en route from Dayton to Xenia when it hit the tree trunk and swerved down a four-foot embankment into a ditch. The car did not upset, and while Miss Bales was unhurt, Miss Johnston received a painful injury to her nose.

The mishap was investigated by Sheriff John Baughn, Chief Deputy Walton Spahr and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, who reported that traffic on the highway was blocked for thirty minutes before the fallen tree could be sidetracked. The accident happened about 10:15 p.m.

Part of a large barn on the Ed S. Foust farm, on the Foust Road, two and one-half miles east of Xenia, was unroofed, and portions of the roofs were torn from two barns near Alpha, owned by William Coy and the Merrick sisters.

Aside from a roof being blown off a brooder house at the home of Simon Bowermaster, no damage was reported sustained in the vicinity of Bowerville.

Early reports Monday indicated that telephone poles were down in scattered sections of the county, but that communication facilities were not seriously hampered and all toll lines were functioning.

STORM CAUSES HEAVY DAMAGE MONDAY NIGHT

blown out of the tenant house on the premises.

The fine country home of the Earleys was also damaged to some extent. A heavy French west door was blown out and shattered glass hurled through the interior of the residence. Kitchen windows were broken and the wind ripped off a stair door and a panel door in the kitchen.

At the Howard Glass home, four miles east of the city on the same pike, the gable end of the roof on the brick house was blown down, windows were broken, and chimneys torn down. The damage was placed at $100.

The roof and second story of the house on the Oakdale Spar farm near the Thurman Earley property, was wrecked and the roof blown from the barn. Some of the shingles were said to have been carried one-eighth of a mile by the wind and deposited in the tenant house on the Earley farm where they were found on the dining room floor.

Part of the roof collapsed and the front wall of the Concord school, a brick building in Beaver Creek Twp., caved in. The school is located near Mt. Zion at the intersection of the Indian Ripple and Power House Roads, eight miles west of Xenia. Across the road from the damaged school, the home of George Hare was damaged. Windows were blown out. Shingles were torn from the roof and a woodshed was leveled.

The windstorm was directly responsible for an auto accident in which two Xenia girls escaped serious injury when their auto struck a tree that had blown down across the Dayton-Xenia Pike, about seven miles west of Xenia. A coupe, owned and driven by Miss Lena M. Bales, and also occupied by Miss Frances Johnston, was en route from Dayton to Xenia when it hit the tree trunk and swerved down a four-foot embankment into a ditch. The car did not upset, and while Miss Bales was unhurt, Miss Johnston received a painful injury to her nose.

The mishap was investigated by Sheriff John Baughn, Chief Deputy Walton Spahr and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, who reported that traffic on the highway was blocked for thirty minutes before the fallen tree could be sidetracked. The accident happened about 10:15 p. m.

BLIZZARD FOLLOWS SEVERE RAIN, WIND STORM IN MID-WEST

winds and hail. Many windows were broken and automobiles were stalled in the streets as water caused short circuits in ignition systems.

Freakish weather in Akron whipped the wind to fifty-one miles an hour at one time during the night, and swung it around the compass to the eastward, from the north and from the west.

Akron, as well as Cleveland, witnessed the unusual spectacle of an electrical storm, with temperatures slightly above freezing and the ground covered with snow.

A miniature tornado which swept through the Radnor community, six miles northwest of Delaware in Delaware County, caused damage estimated between $50,000 and $100,000.

A dozen barns were demolished and many houses were unroofed. Outbuildings and windmills on the premises.

Light and power service was disrupted by the storm and service on the C. D. and M. Railway between Delaware and Marion was halted.

CHICAGO, March 22.—A rampaging March blizzard roared across the country today, crippling communications and hampering travel with a heavy blanket of wet snow whipped into drifts by high winds.

Thunder and lightning heralded the approach of the storm as it swept into central and eastern cities taking a toll of dead and injured in dozens of accidents.

COLD WEATHER COMES

The blizzard swirled out of the southwest, struck Chicago yesterday and today was centered over the Ohio valley and Great Lakes. Roads were impassable in parts of Indiana and Illinois where huge drifts piled up.

Urban transportation was hard hit in larger centers. Hundreds of men received employment to keep streets and tracks clear of snow.

Airplane travel out of Chicago, including mail schedules, was discontinued. High winds, low ceiling and lack of visibility grounded virtually all planes.

The storm's severity diminished in Chicago today but not until suburban street car systems had been put out of commission. Blocked roads stalled scores of motorists in small towns.

Heavy wind and electrical storms hit the southern edge of the storm area. One was dead and at least six persons injured in lower Indiana. Hundreds of thousands of dollars damage was reported. Several families fled when their homes were destroyed. At Evansville, Ind., a $500,000 furniture factory was wrecked. Heavy damage occurred in the Bedford district.

Similar storms of near tornado proportions struck near Harrisburg in southern Illinois. The high school gymnasium at Carrier Mills, Ill., was destroyed and a dozen houses unroofed by the wind.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.—Isaiah, ix, 20.

BEAUTIFUL MUSIC

In this year of centennials and bicentennials we are reminded that the 100 years between 1732 and 1832 not only witnessed the rise of a new nationalistic fervor in Europe and America, but felt the surge of a vast emotional power. While the alignments and realignments of political supremacy in the Eighteenth and early Nineteenth Centuries were temporal in character, this other force was compelling the expression of eternal verities which thunder and echo in our souls, though the kingdoms of the world are fast disintegrating.

Between the birth of Haydn in 1732, and the death of the poet Goethe in 1832, lies a century of musical accomplishment unmatched in the history of the civilized world for its intrinsic splendor and its unparalleled influence. It is not amiss to mention Goethe in this connection, since his "Faust" had already moved Lindpainter to compose a setting first presented at Stuttgart in June, 1832, even if we are most familiar with the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust," first given in 1846, and the Gounod music of an 1859 premiere. Poetry and music are equally the children of rhythm. The majority of the books in Mozart's small library were volumes of verse from which he had chosen lyrics to put to music.

The musical situation in Europe of that day was intensely dramatic, as we look back upon it. Italian operatic music was held in highest esteem, in the very years when the Teutonic masters were beginning to follow the divine inspiration of their souls. The death of Johann Sebastian Bach in 1750 left no hint to his younger contemporaries of these immortal treasures set down in the church organist's productive years at Weimar and Leipzig. In their later lives both Mozart and Haydn, discovering Bach manuscripts, bowed before his genius and acknowledged what his influence might have meant, had the acquaintance with his music come earlier.

Patronage was the key to acclaim in those days when courts of greater or less importance were scattered all over Europe. That is why the spirit of the Eighteenth Century lives so vividly in the minutes and other less imposing compositions which every kapellmeister turned out as a matter of course.

Lack of patronage meant poverty, obscurity and heartbreak, such as Mozart knew. "Papa" Haydn, who helped Mozart with his kindness, was snug and safe and appreciated in the bosom of the Esterhazy family. To him Mozart dedicated a series of quartets, and to him came the young Beethoven as a pupil. Yet in the noise of the Gluck-Piccinni "quarrel" other names were heard but faintly. That "quarrel" may actually have created wider recognition for and deeper interest in the music produced north of Italy, though in its own day it had only the nature of a furious, personal partisanship, in which Versailles was ranged on the side of Gluck, who had been Marie-Antoinette's singing teacher. It was chiefly a triumph of patronage, as it stood from which much of Gluck's music has survived the judgments of time, while Piccinni's is virtually forgotten.

Whether it was, of itself, good or evil; the era of benevolent despotism in Europe unwittingly fostered more majestic and sublimely beautiful music than we have yet to hear produced in the same period of years. The torrent of symphonies, church music, quartets and incidental patterns of harmony poured forth by Bach, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven has long since become the fountain head, the life stream of modern music.

BEING BORED

Quite possibly there are almost as many kinds of bores as there are types of persons. One man's bore may be another man's boon companion. In the simplest terms, a bore is someone whose conversation wears one, either because of its dullness, its repetitions, its length, or its irrelevance.

G. K. Chesterton has written an article on the general subject of bores. He observes that two kinds of boredom exist. One is "only a sort of somnolence," the other is "a definite irritation." Pointless conversation, no matter how rambling, may be soothing. But the "dread, deadly and destructive Bore" may be known by the fact that "it takes him 1,000 years to get to his own point; and, second, that he cannot realize that everybody else has got beyond that point." Mr. Chesterton also believes that "there is a responsibility for being bored as well as a responsibility for boring . . . the person who has easily allowed himself to be bored is very likely to be a bore."

Plenty of people these days complain of being bored by this or that in particular, or life in general. They seem to expect that their lament calls for sensitive souls to be subject to the utter stupidities of this world.

Mr. Chesterton admits that it would take "the mystical charity of St. Francis, the elemental universality of Walt Whitman, the insatiable curiosity of a great psychologist and the rabid romantic ardor of a real born reporter" to make anything out of some conversations. "For indeed there is something dark and aboriginal about the Bore; he belongs to chaos and old night, before the shapes and colors were created. His mind lies in the midst of modern civilization, like some huge dark swamp that swallows every living thing, on the very edges of which all movement is clogged and retarded, in the midst of which all swift and strong and struggling things are sucked down. For it is indeed, pool of that primordial Nothing, still waiting to uncreate the world."

In view of all this one should take care lest he indict himself as being part of that "primordial Nothing," one whose existence is uncreative, instead of being constructive.

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF OPPORTUNITY

John D. Rockefeller saw his opportunity in petroleum. He saw a large population in this country needing better lights. Petroleum was plentiful, but the refining process so crude that the product was very unsafe when placed in oil lamps.

Here was his chance. He knew a man of experience who might help him work out an improved process of refining, it was Samuel Andrews, the porter in a machine shop where both had worked. These two started a single barrel still in 1870, using an improved process discovered by Mr. Andrews. They made a superior grade of oil and prospered rapidly.

They soon admitted the third partner, Mr. Flagler, but Mr. Andrews soon became dissatisfied; knowing his dissatisfaction, Mr. Rockefeller said, "What will you take for your interest?"

Andrews wrote carelessly on a piece of paper, one million dollars. The next day Mr. Rockefeller gave him that amount much to his surprise saying "Cheaper at one million than ten."

In twenty years the business of the little one barrel refinery expanded into a business capitalized at ninety million dollars.

MY NEW YORK
By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Manhattan paradise:

Some dizzy connoisseur of crowds ought to station himself on the corner, say, of 42nd street and Fifth avenue, and apply the thermometer of his observation to that howling intersection; and then he should shoot over to some other equally informative spot in another town—say to where Pennsylvania avenue joins 13th street in Washington D. C., or to where Frederickstrasse meets Unter den Linden, in Berlin.

He'd accumulate, I wager, more laboratory material on the Manhattan location than in the other towns. There have been times when, watching that improbable human criss-cross of streams at 42nd and Fifth, I've been convinced that I saw two sharply different rivers of humanity, the one along the aristocratic avenue, and the other along 42nd street.

I never have seen a silk hat in 42nd street. I have rarely seen a poignantly lovely lady—and whenever such a figure floats by, she seems to have lost her way and wandered out of Fifth, her proper milieu. If Jimmy Walker or Grover Whalen should be spied strolling crosstown, the observer might be sure that both would turn left or right into Fifth—yet this certainty wouldn't obtain at all a block north or south, in 43rd or 41st. Then they might easily keep going.

Am I obscure? I don't mean to be; the thing is really almost a tangible fact. The types along those two boulevards are, it seems to me the most constant and the most marked of any that frequent the highways of the world.

And that doesn't necessarily mean that all the color of Fifth avenue is what is described as "class." The other day I was attracted to a gentle-eyed little old lady in fur tips who was pausing at intervals, bound up onto the avenue, to cross herself, point frowning toward the sky, make a neat curtsey to no one in particular and continue the ritual.

She drew scarcely a sidelong glance from the intently strolling walkers at her elbow. In 42nd street one of several things would surely have occurred. Either she would have been arrested, she'd have been surrounded at once by a tittering crowd, or she'd have been selling something.

At, say, the Washington intersection, on the other hand, the crowds possess more homogeneity and less excitement. It is impossible, since the bar was removed from the Willard hotel, to tell in which direction a senator is going to turn.

Well, it wasn't any of his business.

If there was any gossip there and I knew it, as it happens I would, it didn't belong to him. He wasn't any old friend. He wasn't an expert on married psychology. He couldn't help them by knowing. He was just nosy, curious, just wanted to know.

No reaction at all. Not the tiniest bit. My conscience showed as clear as if I'd never told a lie in all my days.

Telling the truth to a gossip is worse than black lie; telling a lie to a gossip is better than the luke-warm truth.

Guess that's why my conscience didn't hurt me.

Well, I lied. I drew the long bow and explained with convincing detail just how happy those two young people are. I proved to him—absolutely—that those two didn't even dream of divorce.

So I lied. I drew the long bow and explained with convincing detail just how happy those two young people are. I proved to him—absolutely—that those two didn't even dream of divorce.

Back in Sunday school, long time ago, I was taught that it was a terrible sin to lie. My teacher said small boys who lied never got to Heaven. The Heaven she talked about didn't have any bicycles or sleds or fishing pools, or other advantages of the sort, but such as it was, it wouldn't be mine if I told lies.

"Liked" should not be compounded with would or should. Say "He would have liked to go." Not "He would liked to have gone."

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF OPPORTUNITY

John D. Rockefeller saw his opportunity in petroleum. He saw a large population in this country needing better lights. Petroleum was plentiful, but the refining process so crude that the product was very unsafe when placed in oil lamps.

Here was his chance. He knew a man of experience who might help him work out an improved process of refining, it was Samuel Andrews, the porter in a machine shop where both had worked. These two started a single barrel still in 1870, using an improved process discovered by Mr. Andrews. They made a superior grade of oil and prospered rapidly.

They soon admitted the third partner, Mr. Flagler, but Mr. Andrews soon became dissatisfied; knowing his dissatisfaction, Mr. Rockefeller said, "What will you take for your interest?"

Andrews wrote carelessly on a piece of paper, one million dollars.

The next day Mr. Rockefeller gave him that amount much to his surprise saying "Cheaper at one million than ten."

In twenty years the business of the little one barrel refinery expanded into a business capitalized at ninety million dollars.

THE "NINETEENTH HOLE"

Describes New Treatment

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

During the war in Germany a white liquid of a peculiar sweetish odor was used in factories for removing grease from the metal parts of machinery and in varnish used to cover airplane wings.

It was observed that some of the workers in these factories developed a numbness of the face in the region supplied by the trigeminal nerve. One man came back to the factory after a year to get a whiff of which had neuralgia.

Dr. Clendening cured his facial neuralgia.

On this hint, the substance, trichloroethylene, began to be used deliberately to cure trigeminal neuralgia. Within the last year or two it has been somewhat extensively used in this country. The drug is now prepared by drug manufacturing firms and can be obtained through any pharmacist.

It is put up in thin glass ampoules with a covering of knitted silk. The ampoule can be crushed in a handkerchief and the fumes inhaled. The dosage is three or four of these inhalations in twenty-four hours, and this should be kept up for a month or six weeks. If relief is obtained sooner the treatment can be stopped. But the trial should not be given up until treatment has been carried out for a month or six weeks. Excessive dosage is harmful, and the method should, therefore, be used under a physician's supervision.

A certain number of patients obtain relief from their neuralgia by this method. The relief appears to be quite permanent. After

I.F.: Is it a case of anemia transmitted to children by inheritance?

Answer: There is no good evidence that anemia is transmitted by inheritance, and it is perfectly safe for anemic people to marry, on the grounds of eugenics.

"Red Gods" Call Boy Friend

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

And now comes the girl whose boy friend has the wanderlust. He's always disappearing without warning, she states, and it's disconcerting, I admit, as how can one depend on dates and things if the escort is suddenly seized with a desire to "wander and to roam," and disappears?

Dear Virginia Lee: I'm wondering if you could tell me what to do in a case like this:

Virginia Lee: I am only 16. I have a boy friend 18 whom I like very much, but there is one thing I don't like about him. His love of nature makes him want to go on trips somewhere all the time. I'm never sure when I'll see him again because whenever he feels like taking a trip somewhere he just goes without telling anyone.

To tell the truth, Virginia, he is just like bad money when it comes to knowing where he'll be in the next 24 hours.

I don't believe he thinks my feelings toward him are very sincere, because I am generally considered quite a humorist and, alas, Virginia, who believes a humorist? I think much more of him than I have ever thought of anyone else.

Please tell me Virginia, do you think he will ever outgrow his love for travel. You all do it if you are normal, for all of us have some of our faraway ancestors' love for the call of the Red Gods. Always be ready to pack the little old suitcase and the babies, if any, and go off on a lark. It's fun if you are the type that can adjust yourself and not live so complexly that you can't drop things and go. In the meantime, go with other boys so you don't have to depend entirely on him.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.—Isaiah, ix, 20.

BEAUTIFUL MUSIC

In this year of centennials and bicentennials we are reminded that the 100 years between 1732 and 1832 not only witnessed the rise of a new nationalistic fervor in Europe and America, but felt the surge of a vast emotional power. While the alignments and realignments of political supremacy in the Eighteenth and early Nineteenth Centuries were temporal in character, this other force was compelling the expression of eternal verities which thunder and echo in our souls, though the kings of the world are fast disintegrating.

Between the birth of Haydn in 1732, and the death of the poet Goethe in 1832, lie a century of musical accomplishment unmatched in the history of the civilized world for its intrinsic splendor and its unparalleled influence. It is not amiss to mention Goethe in this connection, since his "Faust" had already moved Lindpainter to compose a setting first presented at Stuttgart in June, 1832, even if we are most familiar with the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust," first given in 1846, and the Gounod music of an 1859 premiere. Poetry and music are equally the children of rhythm. The majority of the books in Mozart's small library were volumes of verse from which he had chosen lyrics to put to music.

The musical situation in Europe of that day was intensely dramatic, as we look back upon it. Italian operatic music was held in highest esteem, in the very years when the Teutonic masters were beginning to follow the divine inspiration of their souls. The death of Johann Sebastian Bach in 1750 left no hint to his younger contemporaries of these immortal treasures set down in the church organist's productive years at Weimar and Leipzig. In their later lives both Mozart and Haydn, discovering Bach manuscripts, bowed before his genius and acknowledged what his influence might have meant, had the acquaintance with his music come earlier.

Patronage was the key to acclaim in those days when courts of greater or less importance were scattered all over Europe. That is why the spirit of the Eighteenth Century lives so vividly in the minutes and other less imposing compositions which every kapell-meister turned out as a matter of course.

Lack of patronage meant poverty, obscurity and heartbreak, such as Mozart knew. "Papa" Haydn, who helped Mozart with his kindness, was snug and safe and appreciated in the bosom of the Esterhazy family. To him, Mozart dedicated a series of quartets, and to him came the young Beethoven as a pup. Yet in the noise of the Gluck-Piccinni "quarrel" other names were heard but faintly. That "quarrel" may actually have created wider recognition for and deeper interest in the music produced north of Italy, though in its own day it had only the nature of a furious, personal partisanship, in which Versailles was ranged on the side of Gluck, who had been Marie-Antoinette's singing teacher. It was chiefly a triumph of patronage, as it stood from which much of Gluck's music has survived the judgments of time, while Piccinni's is virtually forgotten.

Whether it was, of itself, good or evil; the era of benevolent despotism in Europe unwittingly fostered more majestic and sublimely beautiful music than we have yet to hear produced in the same period of years. The torrent of symphonies, church music, quartets and incidental patterns of harmony poured forth by Bach, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven has long since become the fountain head, the life stream of modern music.

BEING BORED

Quite possibly there are almost as many kinds of bores as there are types of persons. One man's bore may be another man's boon companion. In the simplest terms, a bore is someone whose conversation wears one, either because of its dullness, its repetitions, its length or its irrelevance.

G. K. Chesterton has written an article on the general subject of bores. He observes that two kinds of boredom exist. One is "only a sort of somnolence;" the other is "a definite irritation." Pointless conversation, no matter how rambling, may be soothng. But the "dread, deadly and destructive Bore" may be known by the fact that "it takes him 1,000 years to get to his own point; and, second, because he cannot realize that everybody else has got beyond that point." Mr. Chesterton also believes that "there is a responsibility for being bored as well as a responsibility for boring . . . the person who has easily allowed himself to be bored is very likely to be a bore."

Plenty of people these days complain of being bored by this or that in particular, or life in general. They seem to expect that their lament calls for sensitive souls to be subject to the utter stupidities of this world.

Mr. Chesterton admits that it would take "the mystical charity of St. Francis, the elemental universality of Walt Whitman, the insatiable curiosity of a great psychologist and the rabid romantic ardor of a real born reporter" to make anything out of some conversations. "For indeed there is something dark and aboriginal about the Bore; he belongs to chaos and old night, before the shapes and colors were created. His mind lies in the midst of modern civilization, like some huge dark swamp that swallows every living thing, on the very edges of which all movement is clogged and retarded, in the midst of which all swift and strong and struggling things are sucked down. For it is indeed, a pool of that primordial Nothing, still waiting to uncreate the world."

In view of all this one should take care lest he indite himself as being part of that "primordial Nothing," one whose existence is uncreative, instead of being constructive.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Manhattan paradise:

Some dizzy connoisseur of crowds ought to station himself on the corner, say, of 42nd street and Fifth avenue, and apply the thermometer of his observation to that howling intersection; and then he should shoot over to some other equally informative spot in another town—say to where Pennsylvania avenue joins 13th street in Washington D. C., or to where Frederickstrasse meets Unter den Linden, in Berlin.

He'd accumulate, I wager, more laboratory material on the Manhattan location than in the other towns. There have been times when, watching that improbable human criss-cross of streams at 42nd and Fifth, I've been convinced that I saw two sharply different rivers of humanity, the one along the aristocratic avenue, and the other along 42nd street.

I never have seen a silk hat in 42nd street. I have rarely seen a poignantly lovely lady—and whenever such a figure floats by, she seems to have lost her way and wandered out of Fifth, her proper milieu. If Jimmy Walker or Grover Whalen should be spied strolling crosstown, the observer might be sure that both would turn left or right into Fifth—yet this certainty wouldn't obtain at all a block north or south, in 43rd or 41st. Then they might easily keep going.

Am I obscure? I don't mean to be; the thing is in reality almost a tangible fact. The types along those two boulevards are, it seems to me the most constant and the most marked of any that frequent the highways of the world.

And that doesn't necessarily mean that all the color of Fifth avenue is what is described as "class." The other day I was attracted to a gentle-eyed little old lady in tip-top who was pausing at intervals, bound up in the avenue, to cross herself, point frowning toward the sky, make a neat curtsey to no one in particular and continue the ritual.

She drew scarcely a sidelong glance from the intently strolling walkers at her elbow. In 42nd street one of several things would surely have occurred. Either she would have been arrested, she'd have been surrounded at once by a tittering crowd, or she'd have been selling something.

At, say, the Washington intersection, on the other hand, the crowds possess more homogeneity and less excitement. It is impossible, since the bar was removed from the Willard hotel, to tell in which direction a character is going to turn.

I'd just finished telling a lie. And for some minutes I sat there waiting for the "reaction". . . . You know, waiting the way you do when the doctor sticks some vaccine into your arm and you wait to see it swell up and hurt and look all red and ugly.

Such practical problems as school theft, cheating and wrong sex attitudes and habits cannot be well dealt with by the school alone.

They are only a part of the general problem of regard for others' rights and the child's best physical, social and mental health, reaching back to early infancy.

The hope of the school to serve in a big way in character education is to inspire the home to recognize that the most influential teachers of the child are his parents, and to be ready to lend every possible assistance in helping make available to parents opportunities for undertaking in a serious systematic way to improve themselves in parenting.

PLEASANT GRANGE AGAIN CHAMPIONS OF GRANGE LEAGUE

Beats Spring Valley In Final Contest Of Tournament

Pleasant Grange of Bowersville successfully defended its title as Grange basketball champions of Greene County by defeating Spring Valley Grange basketeers, 36 to 21, in the finals of the second annual Grange tournament at Jefferson High School in Bowersville Monday night.

Pleasant Grange had advanced to the finals by triumphing over Charity Grange, 35 to 23 in the semi-finals, the champs resting an hour before taking the floor again for the final tourney contest.

An exhibition consolation contest was sandwiched in between the two tournament games in the evening. Caesarcreek Grange playing half a game against Jamestown Grange and the second half against Xenia Grange. Caesar cagers scored thirty points as compared with fourteen for Jamestown and their tallied thirty-one against eight for Xenia Grange.

Award of a trophy to Pleasant Grange was not made after the tournament Monday evening, owing to an unforeseen delay in having the trophy properly engraved.

The presentation will be made at the meeting of Greene County Pomona Grange, donor of the trophy at Charity Grange hall, March 30.

Two all-tournament Grange teams, selected by Hargrave and Stratton, who officiated the contests, are as follows: first team—A. Zink of Charity and Bone of Pleasant, at forwards; Mesech of Caesarcreek at center; A. Chitty of Pleasant and Turner of Spring Valley at guards; second team—McKay and G. Gravitt of Caesarcreek, at forwards; Hargrave of Pleasant, at center; Stittsworth and R. Ross of Pleasant, at guards.

Now let us attempt to localize this theoretical trend toward the fast-breaking method of offense, by applying the same method of reasoning to the annual Greene County Class B tournament.

Here you find the exact opposite is apparently the case. The era of high scoring contests in the county tournament appears to be passing. The scores of the recent 1932 tourney held at Osborn were generally large, but not nearly so high as during the 1931 tournament. In the seven games played in the 1932 tourney, a grand total of 315 points was scored as compared with 428 the year previous.

From this it may be seen that mad scrambles for the basket have been replaced by a style of play with more emphasis placed on de-

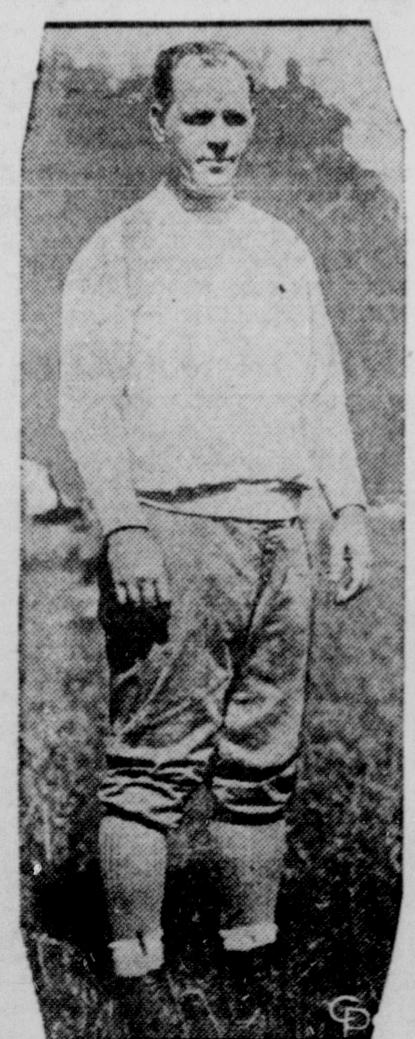

From the standpoint of the spectators, the offensive style of basketball is the more appealing. It is more interesting at any rate to watch than the slower type in which a lot of time is lost while the team with the ball bides its time and patiently waits for scoring opportunities close to the basket.

EARL MARTINEAU GOES TO PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., March 22.—The appointment of Earl Martineau, former backfield coach at Purdue, as assistant football coach at Princeton, was announced last night by Dr. Charles R. Kennedy, chairman of the Princeton board of athletic control.

Martineau, regarded as one of the finest halfbacks ever graduated from Minnesota, will assist Herbert O. Crisler starting April 4.

NEW IOWA COACH

HOW NOT TO REDUCE

By Henry McLemore

NEW YORK, March 22—Leo Pinetzki, the ponderous Pole, according to the latest bulletin from Jack Curley's wrestling headquarters eats the following lineup each day:

Breakfast—20 eggs (scrambled), 3 lbs. stewed tomatoes, 2 qts. milk, pumpernickel bread and butter. Lunch—3 pounds steak (polish style), potatoes, (plenty of 'em), cabbage soup, pumpernickel, pint ice cream. Dinner—2 qts. buttermilk, 15 eggs, 3 lbs flaki, fruits.

This seems an awful lot, even for a ponderous Pole. So I decided to give it a try yesterday. Not knowing what "flaki" was, I substituted one wicker rocking chair, well done. I beg to report that it can be done, but it leaves little or no time for the course of the winds that brought disaster to the state.

Ossie Solem, former Drake University coach, has signed a three-year contract as the new head grid coach of the University of Iowa, succeeding Burt Ingwersen, resigned. Solem was a star end with the University of Minnesota in his playing days.

The storm was first reported at Linden and Myrtlewood, two small communities about forty miles east of Meridian, Miss. They are slightly south of the center of the state.

At this point the storm apparently split, one part moving fifteen miles directly north to Demopolis where there was little damage, then on forty miles to Northport where many were killed and hurt.

The other section of the storm headed northeast from Linden to Myrtlewood, ten miles east to Faunsdale, another fifteen miles to Marion, and then turned almost straight east twenty-five miles to this town and Thorsby. From here it moved north to Columbiana, only twenty miles from Birmingham.

STRIKES GEORGIA

An off shoot of the storm hit Cullman, fifty miles north of Birmingham, while high winds and lightning broke communication lines all through the South, especially in east Tennessee and north Georgia.

The storm swept eastward into Georgia where nine persons were killed and approximately forty injured in communities near Cartersville, before it reached the Georgia town, however, the twister claimed three lives at Palmetto Rock and fourteen at Sylacauga, Ala.

More than 150 were injured in two towns.

One man was killed at Decatur, Ga., suburb of Atlanta, when he walked into a broken high-voltage wire brought down by the wind.

The more southerly branch of the storm wandered off toward Athens seat of the University of Georgia, where five persons, three white, were killed. The windstorm killed seven others at Comer, Ga., nearby. Fifteen storm victims were under treatment in Athens hospitals.

FIRE FOLLOWS WIND

Fire followed the wind through Northport. Eight city blocks were reported razed there and the flames spread rapidly before they finally were checked. Fire trucks served also as ambulances.

Hysterical relatives of dead or missing wandered aimlessly through the streets until finally directed by guardsmen or sympathetic townspeople toward a place of rest, or to the first aid stations.

The injured at Northport taxed the capacity of the 100-bed hospital. Twelve of them, it was believed, were near death.

Survivors described the violence of the wind in that city.

"The wind picked up a lumber pile and drove it like a catapult right into the residential district," one said.

"Some of the victims were impaled by the flying timbers. Others were hurled against ruined buildings. Bodies were tossed into the air."

BABY BLOWN AWAY

One strange story was that of nine children left at home by the Latham family at Plantersville, eighteen miles from here. Six of them were killed outright in the storm which leveled their home.

The smallest baby was blown away. It had not been found at daylight today. Two others were in critical condition.

At Columbiana, north of Clanton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Walton, an elderly couple, were killed.

Walton's body was found in the wreckage of the house. Mrs. Walton had been borne by the wind out into the front yard. Their daughter, Ella, 38, died in an ambulance enroute to Birmingham hospital. Miss Ethel Walton, the only survivor, is in a critical condition in Birmingham.

The family's assets, including farmstock, crops, farm buildings and even trees, all except the land itself, have been wiped out.

As the correspondent walked about Union Grove, fifteen miles north of Clanton, a truck bearing six bodies passed on its way to Clanton.

CARRIES DEAD CHILD

A man walked down the road, a dead child in his arms.

Near Columbiana bodies of two Negroes known to have been in their home when the storm struck, were found a quarter of a mile away.

As the night passed, the congestion in Druid city hospital was relieved by removal of victims to fraternity houses, dormitories and gymnasium of Alabama University.

The university's dance floor and basketball floor bore orderly rows of cots about which moved nurses and members of the medical staff of Alabama Hospital for the insane.

Lost children were harbored at a fraternity house. Anxious mothers of missing babies visited the house throughout the night most of them were disappointed.

MANY HOMELESS

There were 750 homeless at Northport, where the storm leveled a cross-roads store operated by a Negro named Daniels. Other Negroes rushed from all directions, grabbed the scattered packages and fled. Daniels' body was thrown forty feet clear of the wreckage.

Grady Wheatley, truck driver, lay on a cot in a tourist cottage with a broken leg when the storm struck. The twister lifted the four walls of the structure without even disturbing the sheets on the bed.

The victims of the storm lived on a farm, two miles from here. They were: Mrs. Witt Puisear, 50; Billy Puisear, 16; Cynthia Puisear, 10; J. W. Puisear, 7; one other Puisear child.

The father of the family and three other children were injured.

FRANKLIN, Tenn., March 22—Five were dead here today as the result of the storm which swept over Southern Tennessee. A number of houses were blown down in Pulaski.

The victims of the storm lived on a farm, two miles from here. They were: Mrs. Witt Puisear, 50; Billy Puisear, 16; Cynthia Puisear, 10; J. W. Puisear, 7; one other Puisear child.

The father of the family and three other children were injured.

FRANKLIN, Tenn., March 22—Russell Beasley, 18, was killed and his father, Barney Beasley, 65, was near death in the wind-storm here.

Zinc Davis, 25, was seriously injured, her head crushed. The Beasleys and Miss Davis lived at Hillsboro, eight miles from here.

STATE TOURNAMENT BROUGHT IN $8,000

COLUMBUS, O., March 22.—The Ohio high school basketball tournament, played here last week, was one of the most successful financially in the history of the state meeting.

Seventeen thousand admissions netted nearly $8,000, H. R. Townsend, high school athletic commissioner, said today. A complete report on the gate receipts will be made soon.

The success of the basketball tournament has assured high schools of the state of their annual spring championships in track, baseball golf and tennis. However, the High School Athletic Association will discontinue giving trophies to winning teams and individuals, at a saving of several hundred dollars.

Townsend said the site of the 1933 basketball tournament would not be selected immediately. Cleveland Public Hall, Akron Goodyear Gymnasium, the Dayton Coliseum and the Akron Zeppelin hangar have been suggested as possible tournament sites, but Townsend pointed out that none is centrally located.

PLEASANT GRANGE AGAIN CHAMPIONS OF GRANGE LEAGUE

Beats Spring Valley In Final Contest Of Tournament

Pleasant Grange of Bowersville successfully defended its title as Grange basketball champions of Greene County by defeating Spring Valley Grange basketeers, 36 to 21, in the finals of the second annual Grange tournament at Jefferson High School in Bowersville Monday night.

Pleasant Grange cagers had advanced to the finals by triumphing over Charity Grange, 35 to 23 in the semi-finals, the champs resting an hour before taking the floor again for the final tourney contest.

An exhibition consolation contest was sandwiched in between the two tournament games in the evening, Caesarcreek Grange playing half a game against Jamestown Grange and the second half against Xenia Grange. Caesar cagers scored thirty points as compared with fourteen for Jamestown, and then tallied thirty-one against eight for Xenia Grange.

Award of a trophy to Pleasant Grange was not made after the tournament Monday evening, owing to an unforeseen delay in having the trophy properly engraved.

The presentation will be made at the meeting of Greene County Po-mons Grange, donor of the trophy at Charity Grange hall, March 30.

Two all-tournament Grange teams, selected by Hargrave and Stratton, who officiated the contests, are as follows: first team—A. Zink of Charity and Bone of Pleasant, at forwards; Mesecher of Caesarcreek at center; A. Chitty of Pleasant and Turner of Spring Valley at guards; second team—McKay and G. Gravitt of Caesar, at forwards; Hargrave of Pleasant, at center; Stittsworth and R. Ross of Pleasant, at guards.

That a fast-breaking offense is the style of attack that gets the best results was probably one thought brought back by members of Xenia Central High basketball squad after watching the sixteen foremost Class A and Class B scholastic quintets in the state in action in the state tournament finals at Columbus Friday and Saturday.

Buccaneer court teams, for years past, have been taught a slow-breaking offense. They have played a deliberate, methodical game that has generally proved suitable. But times are changing, it seems.

Taking the cue from college mentors, high school coaches are bringing action back to the game.

This was apparent at the state tournament competition in Columbus over the week-end. Most of the sixteen teams entered, survivors of sectional and district play, employed a fast-breaking offense that kept excitement at a high pitch. From the scoring angle, at least, the system got results.

A total of 347 points was scored by the eight Class A teams, as compared with 297 a year ago when a majority of the quintets used a slow-forming offense. In the Class B rivalry the same held true. The Class B teams rolled up 364 points against 317 last year.

In this connection, however, observers observe that personal fouls were more frequent. Quick-breaking offenses resulted in more bodily contact, but there was a woeful lack of accuracy displayed on converting free throws into points.

Now let us attempt to localize this theoretical trend toward the fast-breaking method of offense, by applying the same method of reasoning to the annual Greene County Class B tournament.

Here you find the exact opposite is apparently the case. The era of high scoring contests in the county tournament appears to be passing. The scores of the recent 1932 tourney held at Osborn were generally large, but not nearly so high as during the 1931 tournament.

In the seven games played in the 1932 tourney, a grand total of 315 points was scored as compared with 428 the year previous.

From this it may be seen that mad scrambles for the basket have been replaced by a style of play with more emphasis placed on defense.

From the standpoint of the spectators, the offensive style of basketball is the more appealing. It is more interesting at any rate to watch than the slower type in which a lot of time is lost while the team with the ball bides its time and patiently waits for scoring opportunities close to the baseline.

EARL MARTINEAU GOES TO PRINCETON

The Reds lost their second in a row to Connie Mack's baseball circus at Fort Myers, Fla., Monday. The score was 7 to 4. The game was featured by home runs off the bats of Mickey Heath of the Reds and Ed Coleman of the Athletics.

John Ogden made his first pitching start of the season for the Reds and allowed only three hits in three innings. Bennie Frey and Bill Wysong followed. Wysong, halved by some as a second Lefty Grove, twirled one inning and kept the Athletics under perfect control.

Grove himself pitched for a while and was nicked for three runs in the third inning.

STORES PLAN ANNUAL SPRING OPENING FOR WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Xenia retail establishments will be decked in colorful spring attire and new and attractive Easter merchandise will be displayed when the stores hold their annual spring opening Wednesday night, it is announced.

Plans for the spring show were perfected at a meeting of the Xenia Retail Merchants Association Monday night at the Rotary Club rooms. Stores participating in the opening will remain open Wednesday night until 9 or 9:30 o'clock and are arranging attractive exhibits of merchandise as an introduction of spring goods to Xenia and Greene County visitors.

Departing from the arrangements in former years, sales forces will be maintained at the stores and purchases may be made at all participating stores. Tickets which may be redeemed later for merchandise prizes will be given to visitors and those making purchases will be given additional tickets with each purchase amounting to fifty cents or more. The merchandise prizes will be distributed Thursday by each store.

All Greene County is invited to the opening and special efforts are being made to make the stores attractive for the visitors and accord them every courtesy. Participating stores, which will present their spring stocks in attractive display for the opening, include Osterly's, Eichman Electric Shop, Mina's Hat Shoppe, Adair's Furniture Store, C. A. Weaver Clothing Co., Fred Graham paint store, S. S. Kreiss Co. (both stores), Hutchinson and Gibney Co., Galloway and Cherry furniture store, The Criterion and the Xenia Bargain Store.

Accorded a rousing reception by fellow-students upon their return from Columbus, the Cowboys received many plaudits in chapel service Monday. A chamber of commerce testimonial dinner and dinners by the West Athletic Association and other civic groups still remain on schedule.

The team was the first Akron representative to capture the state title.

An Old Friend in Need

An interesting sidelight of the depression is this resurrection of the old bicycle built for two. Times being so hard, Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, of Norwood, South Australia, found themselves unable to maintain their automobile, so up from the cellar came the ancient vehicle with which they are shown. Despite the obviously sunny day their umbrella is carried as a precaution against the elements there being no "one-man" top on the old wheel.

Congressional Romance

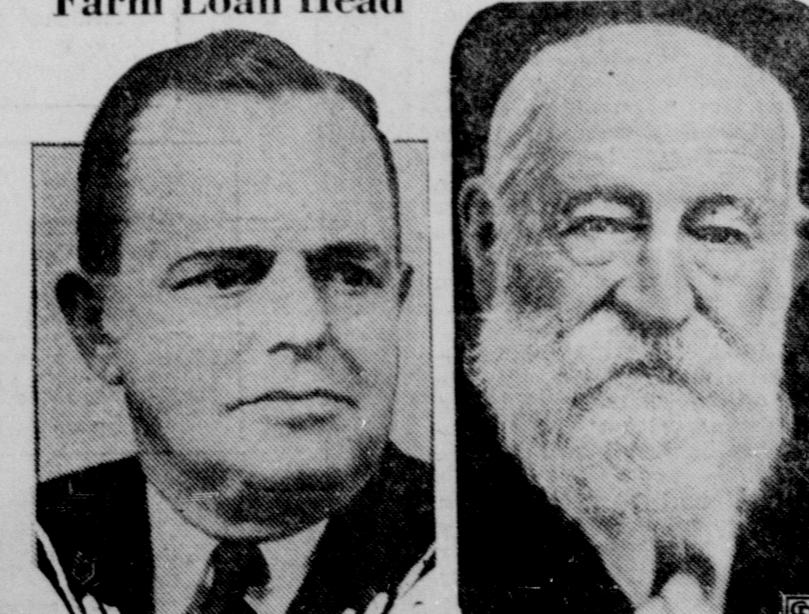

A friendship that started when the bride and groom occupied adjoining seats in the House of Representatives, ripened into love and finally led to the altar, is the romance of the former Ruth Hanna McCormick and Albert G. Simms, who were recently married at Colorado Springs, Colo. Photo shows the couple just after the wedding. A tragic aftermath of the terrific gale that lashed the Atlantic seaboard, causing havoc among shipping, was the death of Charles Graham (left) and William Garton (right), members of the Coast Guard who went to the rescue of the fishing sloop Anna which was in danger of foundering off Absecon Inlet, N. J. Capt. J. S. Turner (inset) reached the shore safely. Three other men of the Atlantic City Coast Guard were lost before the Anna was towed into port.

Disguised as an Iceberg

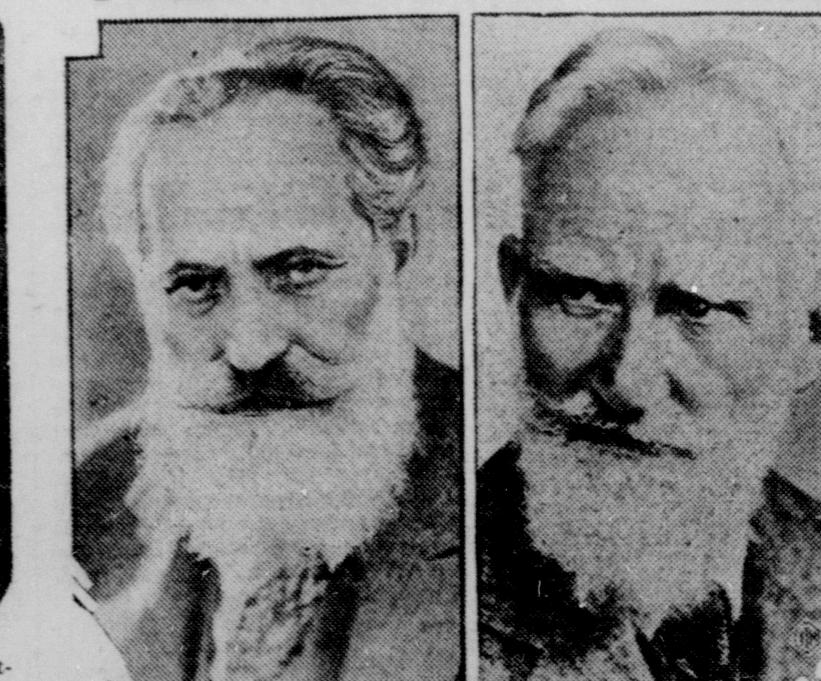

When the fishing schooner "Brookline" docked at her Boston pier after a trip to George's Banks in search of Friday's dinner for the good citizens of Massachusetts she was disguised in the ermine robes of Old King Winter himself. Her superstructure and rigging were coated to a depth of two inches with ice formed by the spray and intense cold of the raging gales she encountered at sea. An interesting sidelight of the depression is this resurrection of the old bicycle built for two. Times being so hard, Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, of Norwood, South Australia, found themselves unable to maintain their automobile, so up from the cellar came the ancient vehicle with which they are shown. Despite the obviously sunny day their umbrella is carried as a precaution against the elements there being no "one-man" top on the old wheel.

Congressional Romance

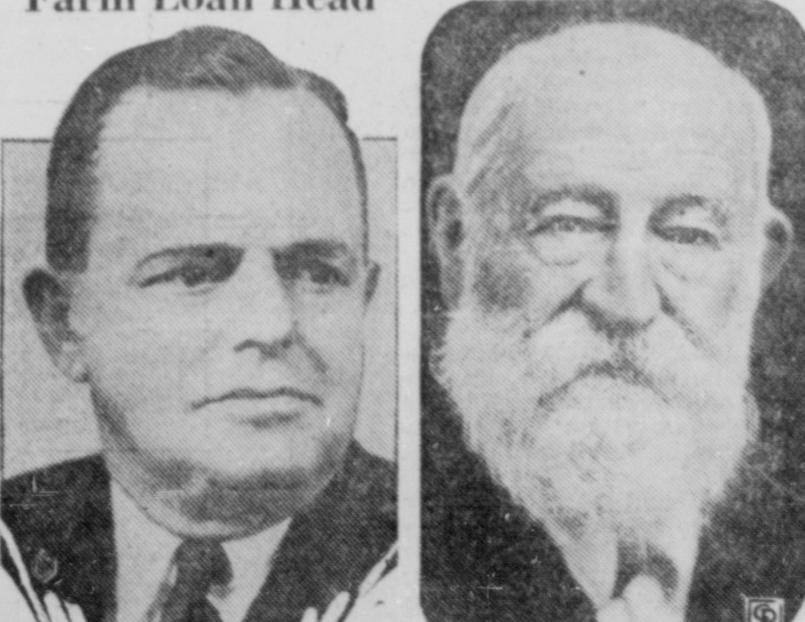

A friendship that started when the bride and groom occupied adjoining seats in the House of Representatives ripened into love and finally led to the altar, in the romance of the former Ruth Hanna McCormick and Albert Simms, who were recently married at Colorado Springs, Colo. Photo shows the couple just after the wedding. Mrs. Simms is a former Congresswoman from Illinois, while Mr. Simms was a representative from New Mexico.

Sniping Doctor New Light Theory

Apparently suddenly becoming the victim of a cerebral cyclone, Dr. Earle E. Prior, of Malden, Mass., locked himself in his office and proceeded to bombard a building across the way with a volley of rifle bullets. When police arrived and forced an entry they found a dozen deadly weapons in his office. Prior was subdued after a struggle and rushed to hospital for observation.

Stockholder 67 Years

Appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Arthur S. Hyde to direct the huge farm loan funds made available by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Henry S. Greater Love Hath No Man

A tragic aftermath of the terrific gale that lashed the Atlantic seaboard, causing havoc among shipping, was the death of Charles Graham (left) and William Garton (right), members of the Coast Guard who went to the rescue of the fishing sloop Anna which was in danger of foundering off Absecon Inlet, N. J. Capt. J. S. Turner (inset) reached the shore safely. Three other men of the Atlantic City Coast Guard were lost before the Anna was towed into port.

Disguised as an Iceberg

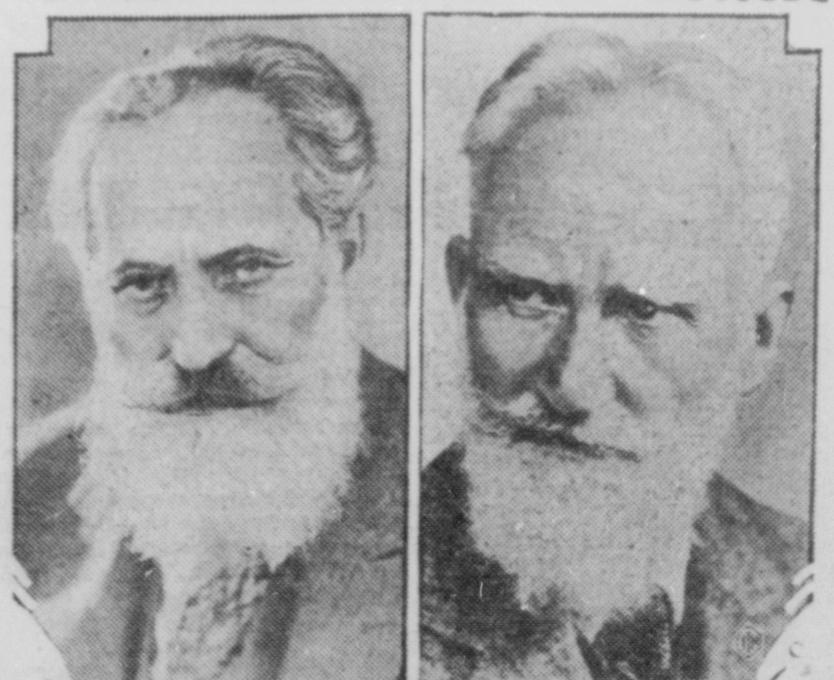

When the fishing schooner "Brookline" docked at her Boston pier after a trip to George's Banks in search of Friday's dinner for the good citizens of Massachusetts she was disguised in the ermine robes of Old King Winter himself. Her superstructure and rigging were coated to a depth of two inches with ice formed by the spray and intense cold of the raging gales she encountered at sea. Photo shows one of the crew hacking off the icy shell.

Ski King and Snow Queen

A queen and one of her notable subjects are shown above as they graciously acknowledged the attentions of the cameraman. The queen is Julia Phyllis Cooper, who was selected to rule over the Winter sports at Big Pines, Cal. Her henchman is Alf Engen, ski meteot, of Salt Lake City. Engen, world professional champion jumper, recently added 14 feet to his own world's record by leaping 257 feet at Big Pines Hill.

"Twins" in World of Letters

Not only does Reuben Brainin, of New York, approach George Bernard Shaw, English man of letters, in literary attainments, but he also bears a marked facial resemblance to the famous cynic. The two men are shown above, Shaw is at right. Brainin is the Hebrew dean of literature who will be honored by a testimonial reception in New York on the occasion of his 70th anniversary.

PLAN PASSION WEEK SERVICES AS LENT APPROACHES CLOSE

Passion Week services at St. Bridgid Catholic Church will embrace the celebration of the institution of the Blessed Sacrament on Holy Thursday, the observance of Good Friday as the day on which the Saviour died on the cross and the usual ritualistic observance of Holy Saturday when Lent comes to an official end, served ecclesiastically with the Eastern morning masses.

The Rev. Lawrence Wessel, pastor, announces that the usual Wednesday night Lenten services will be dispensed with this week and the observance of the closing days of Lent will start with procession of the Blessed Sacrament and mass at 8 o'clock Thursday morning, followed throughout the day by adoration and commemoration of the Holy Eucharist. Services will again be held in the evening at 7:30 o'clock consisting of prayer and adoration.

The mass of the Pre-Sanctified will be celebrated at 8 o'clock in the morning of Good Friday, and special Tre Ore services will be held in the afternoon from 12 to 3 o'clock, ending with stations of the cross and prayers at 2:30. If possible, a radio reception of Tre Ore services from the cathedral in Cincinnati will be arranged in the church.

The Rev. John Trench, pastor of St. Augustine Church, Jamestown, and assistant pastor of St. Bridgid Church, who has preached the series of Lenten sermons, will preach a sermon on the passion at 7:30 o'clock Friday night, the services concluding with the impressive singing of the lamentations and public adoration of the cross.

Mass will be celebrated at 7 o'clock Holy Saturday morning at which time the annual rites of the blessing of the Easter fire, the blessing of the paschal candle, and of the Easter water and baptismal water, will take place followed by the mass. Lent ends officially at noon Saturday.

Easter observance will begin with a solemn, high mass at 6:30 o'clock Sunday at which the Rev. Father Trench will be celebrating, the Rev. Father Wessel deacon and Paul Galliger, student for the priesthood at Mt. St. Mary's Seminary, Cincinnati, will be sub-deacons. Low masses will follow at 8:30 and at 10 o'clock. Easter afternoon at 2:30 o'clock there will be services of prayer and benediction with the Blessed Sacrament.

XENIA AND GREENE COUNTY OBITUARY, FUNERAL NOTICES

J. EDWARD McCREERY
John Edward McCreery, 60, 218 High St., former baggage-master for the Pennsylvania Railroad here, died at a Dayton hospital Tuesday morning at 8:45 o'clock. He had been in failing health one and one-half years.

Mr. McCreery was born in Xenia December 25, 1871, the son of Robert and Anna McCreery, and had spent his entire life here. He was employed in the baggage room and at the Pennsylvania station thirty-five years and served as baggage-master a short time. He was a member of the United Brethren Church and Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 56, K. of P.

Mr. McCreery is survived by the following sisters: Mrs. Glenn Harry, Coquill, Ore.; Mrs. Emma Gorman, who is employed at the O. S. and S. O. Home here; Mrs. Charles Grandin, this city and Miss Ella McCreery, at home. Three brothers preceded him in death.

Funeral services will be held at the United Brethren Church, W. Third St., Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Friends may call at the home, 218 High St., Wednesday evening.

BENJAMIN H. SMITH
Funeral services for Benjamin H. Smith, 79, who died at the home of his son, Edward Smith, Dayton-Yellow Springs Pike, Sunday evening at 9:30 o'clock, will be held at the home of his son Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock followed by services at 2 o'clock at the Fairfield Reformed Church. Burial will be made in the Fairfield Cemetery.

Mr. Smith is survived by three sons: Edward, at whose home he died; William, Fairfield and Harry Smith, of Osborn; and two daughters, Mrs. H. L. Trolinger, Byron and Mrs. Charles Romspert, New Carlisle.

PLAN GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE AT CHURCH

A three-hour devotional service, celebrating Good Friday, will be held at the Mt. Tabor M. E. Church Friday afternoon, it is announced by the pastor, the Rev. J. C. Stitzel. The service has been divided into seven periods corresponding to the seven utterances of Christ while on the cross. The meditations will center around each of the words of Christ, and will be treated devotionally by various pastors who will assist in the services.

The services will begin promptly at 12 o'clock noon and will continue until 3 o'clock. Persons are asked to come and leave the service at the close of a period and not during the period. The Rev. Mr. Stitzel is urging that worshippers make Good Friday a day of fasting and prayer and to abstain entirely from the noonday meal or to partake sparingly of the repast.

CHURCH PLANNING CHILDREN'S NIGHT

"Children's Night" will be observed at revival services at the Old Town M. E. Church Tuesday evening and the Rev. J. C. Stitzel, New Jasper, who is conducting the services, will preach a sermon especially for the children.

A delegation from the Friends Church, Xenia, will attend and Mrs. Richard McClelland will sing.

XENIA IS SECOND POOREST PAINTED CITY SURVEY SHOWS

Xenia is the second poorest painted city in Ohio. This startling statement is attributed to Arthur M. Evert, market analyst for one of the country's largest paint manufacturers.

The statement is based on a personal survey of this city made over a period of two weeks, and which also included a house-to-house canvass.

The findings were compared with the results of similar surveys in other cities.

At the head of the list is Lancaster, which is the best painted city in the state, according to Mr. Evert. There brightly painted homes and garages and fresh painting on downtown structures reflect credit upon the community pride of the citizens. Down next to the bottom of the list in Ohio stands Xenia.

The findings of Mr. Evert do not fit in with the pride of Xenia's townspeople in their community spirit, of which they are fond of boasting. It indicates that the community spirit engendered during the old "clean up and paint up" campaigns of several years ago, has again died.

The survey made by Mr. Evert was an industrial survey, designed, not only to show the need for house paint in Xenia, but to learn if Xenians are using quality paint, what make of paint they favor, and the possibility of this city as a paint market for the company which employs him.

Paint business need not be seasonal if constructive advertising and aggressive methods are employed, the market analyst stated, as he pointed to experiences gleaned in similar surveys in other Ohio cities. As an illustration he recalls an incident in an Ohio city similar in size to Xenia, where the leading paint distributor was convinced, following a survey such as the one conducted here, that the manager of his paint department had not shown the proper aggressiveness necessary to sell paint, and he discharged him.

The discharged employee, ranking under this treatment, resolved to "show up" his former employer. He arranged for another paint agency, established a stock room in the front of his residence, and began an energetic sales campaign by advertising and personal solicitation. Although the season was the autumn, not considered a good

COME HOME, JOEY!

"Joe E. Brown" is missing. Not Joe E. Brown, the film comedian, but a namesake of his—a large yellow Angora cat, belonging to Mrs. J. H. Whitmer, 8 W. Market St.

"Joey," as he is better known in the neighborhood, wandered away ten days ago and has not been seen or heard of since. He is one year old and, strange as it may seem, will come to you if you whistle to him.

The cat was given to Mrs. Whitmer by a relative in Dallas, Tex., in August.

SLIPPERY SECTION OF PIKE DANGEROUS; NEEDS TREATMENT

H. W. Walsh, division state highway engineer for Greene County, declared Tuesday he was uninformed on the question of whether the state highway maintenance department contemplates applying a surface treatment to a slippery stretch of the macadamized Dayton-Xenia Pike, between the Xenia city limits and the Beavercreek Church.

The division engineer said he had been aware for a long time that this portion of the highway, for a distance of nearly five miles, is dangerous for motor travel, and is particularly slippery when moist.

The matter was called to Engineer Walsh's attention because of complaints of motorists that driving along the highway, especially between Trebein and the foot of Lucas hill, is extremely hazardous when the road is wet, unless cars are driven at a snail's pace.

Warning signs reminding motorists of the fact the pike is slippery when wet are erected along the edge of the highway, but autos frequently skid off the paved portion and into ditches the engineer agreed.

Mr. Walsh indicated he would call the highway department's attention to the condition of this stretch of the pike, with the possibility the surface may be given a treatment of coarse chips of rock.

MILLIONS HELPED TO HEALTH BY ALL-BRAN

Has "Bulk" and Vitamin B for Constipation; Also Iron for Blood

In ten years, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has gained an increasing number of friends. Today, it is used by millions with satisfactory results.

New tests show added reasons for the success of ALL-BRAN. Laboratory experiments prove it has "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract.

Another benefit of ALL-BRAN is that it has twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

The headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so often result from constipation can be overcome by this pleasant cereal. How much better than using habit-forming pills and drugs.

ALL-BRAN action is gentle. Its "bulk" is much like that of lettuce. Within the body, it absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass. Gently it clears the intestines of wastes.

Two tablespoonsfuls daily are sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal, or use in cooking. Tempting recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Ben Gets Lyon's Share- Is Lyonized As Player

Xenia fans who saw Constance Bennett's starring vehicle, "Lady with a Past," agree with the studios that are now hot after Ben Lyon because of his fine performance in this film.

Lyon almost stole the show from Miss Bennett, due partly to the clever dialogue that was written into his part. Now, it looks as if Fox will get him to play opposite Constance's newly-wed sister, Joan Bennett in "Week-end Only."

The story is being adapted by William Conselman (author of the comic strip, "Ella Cinders") from Warner Fabian's novel. Alan Crossland is scheduled to direct and will start shooting as soon as join Douglas Fairbanks in the South Seas.

News from the Paramount studio is that the Claudette-Colbert-Clive Brook picture will be "Bride of the Enemy." Oliver H. P. Garrett is making the screen treatment. At the same studio Charles Butterworth has been assigned to play in the new Maurice Chevalier picture, "Love Me Tonight," which will be directed by Reuben Mamoulian, who did such a fine job on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Joan Crawford has five more years at Metro and would like to have Clarence Brown direct every one of her pictures. . . Mae Clarke will have to remain in the hospital two more weeks following a breakdown after a flu attack. . . And Renee Adoree will leave the hospital April 1 to recuperate in a house in the desert country.

The star's honeymoon is over. The Fox negotiations with Ben are being carried on by wire while he is in New York with his wife, Bebe Daniels.

Gary Cooper is definitely coming home at last after a big game expedition. He sails on the Europa next Friday and will go directly to Hollywood. Letters in advance of him tell of his bagging sixty wild animals in the Nairobi country, including everything from gazelles to rhinoceros. His first picture after his return will be opposite Tallulah Bankhead in "Sirens and Tritons," a story of a sunken submarine.

Interest at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is reviving in Anita Page following her performance in "Are You Listening?" and in "Night Court." She has now been assigned the romantic lead in "Prosperity," the much-talked-of Marie Dressler-Polly Moran comedy which goes into production soon with Leo Carey directing.

After playing hooky from Hollywood many months, Charley Chaplin is expected there the last of May. He is now on the Red Sea with stops planned for Ceylon, Straits Settlements, Indo-China, Siam (where he'll visit the king) and Japan, arriving in Tokyo April 13. LAW UNDER TEST

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 22—A decision bearing on the legality of the new Ohio classification tax law will be handed down this week by the court of appeals in a suit brought by E. C. Lamson, Jefferson newspaper publisher, against the Astabula County auditor.

Lamson asked that the auditor be enjoined from collecting the tax on the ground the law is unconstitutional. He charged discrimination between industries and unfair application of rates.

MAN DISCOVERS HIS IDENTITY AFTER AN ATTACK OF AMNESIA

BOWLING GREEN, O., Mar. 21.—Back in 1920 a delivery-man employed by a Pittsburgh express company suddenly quite signing delivery receipts with the name of "Orla Anderson" and started signing them "J. O. Meek."

Unable to explain why he was convinced that his name was Meek instead of Anderson when he was called before his employer, he was discharged.

And thus, it has been revealed, J. G. Meek was put on the road to discovering himself the victim of one of the strangest cases of amnesia yet told. The end of the tale at last appears near.

Since that day Meek has found that he served in the U. S. Marines during the war, that he had been married, and that soon after the wedding he and his bride settled on a homestead near Robinson, Ore., he had disappeared and had been given up by all his kin as the victim of murderers.

The fact that he had married a young widow, Mrs. Rose Rheubright, at New Kensington, Pa., after he suffered a loss of memory would have proved an embarrassing circumstance in the unwinding of the tale of his amnesia but for the fact that the bride of his youth also had remarried.

What gave him the clue that his real name was Meek has not yet been learned. If that can be determined, the story will be cleared up in most principal details.

The revelation about his past came after he decided to submit his finger prints to army officials to learn whether he might have served in the war and suffered injuries that caused his condition.

Word came back that his prints had been found in the Navy files. He was skeptical—he was sure he had never been in the navy. Later it was found that he had instead enlisted in the Marines under the name of Joseph Antrepot, from Trinidad, Colorado.

Writing to Colorado in an effort to trace the clue, he found that a child who was named Jo Meek was born in Trinidad in Las Animas County, on Nov. 25, 1891, the birth date given by "Joseph Antrepot" when he joined the Marines.

A check-up with the parents of the Jo Meek born in Trinidad, who have since moved to Red Cliff, Colo., brought the information that their son had disappeared, supposedly having been murdered at his Oregon homestead by hostile sheep men who resented his efforts to change range into farm land.

The "murder" was packed with mystery. J. O. Meek having been summoned by telegram to the bedside of a brother, who was reported seriously ill. Later it was shown the brother was not ill and the telegram was faked. This strengthened the murder theory in the disappearance.

One of the strangest parts in the story is that one of the men held for a time as a suspect in the case was named Joseph Antrepot, the name given by Meek when he enlisted in the Marines.

For two years after his first marriage, Meek found, he was a student of medicine at Denver.

A crushed-in spot at the base of his skull is believed by physicians here to be evidence to show that he had been injured at sometime, and Meek himself thinks he was attacked after receiving the bogus message at his homestead.

The long-lost son now is planning to be reunited with his parents during the coming summer.

COUNTY AGENT WILL SPEAK AT MEETING

County Agent E. A. Drake will discuss "Some Adjustments in Crops and Cropping Operations" at the March meeting of Caesarcreek Twp. Farm Bureau at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Faulkner Thursday evening. Eldon Helmz and Howard Faulkner are members of the committee in charge of arrangements.

Music will be presented by the "Harmony Four." Kenneth Heinz will sing a solo, "The Lost Sheep" and there will be a pantomime under the direction of Mrs. L. V. Linton. Miss Ruth Radford, county home demonstration agent, will speak on "Recreation for Rural Folks."

A covered dish supper will precede the program and will be served at 7:30 o'clock. Each family is asked to bring a covered dish, sandwiches and table service.

WEARING SHOES IS FATAL TO PIONEER

CARLETON, Okla., March 22.—J. M. Haigler, who spent most of his eighty-seven years going about barefoot to acquire the life-giving properties of the soil, is dead.

Death came Sunday to the picturesquely pioneer, five years after he was forced to wear shoes because his feet became so tender he could not comfortably administer to his vast holdings of thirteen sections of land and attend his general store in this remote village.

Before that time he refused to wear shoes except in the coldest weather. His health began to fail when he adopted footwear as a regular item of dress.

ELECTION CLERK WRINKLES BROW OVER HOW MANY BALLOTS TO HAVE PRINTED

In his capacity as clerk of the board of elections, Earl Short is pondering the debatable question of how many Republican and Democratic ballots to order printed for the May 10 primary election in Greene County.

And take it from the clerk, the problem is a weighty one. It is no easy matter to estimate the probable number of votes that may be cast in the forty-eight precincts.

Four years ago at a similar primary in a presidential year, more than 5,700 votes were recorded. Two years ago the voters flocked to the polls in unexpected large numbers and cast more than 6,300 ballots. Last November, at the general election held in an "off" year, ballot supplies in several precincts were exhausted long before the polls closed on election day and fresh supplies had to be hurriedly printed.

Now another presidential year has rolled around, the list of candidates for county offices whose names will appear on the ballots at the primary is large, and estimates as to the probable size of the vote are at a wide variance.

Mr. Short may decide to canvass the opinions of the four board mem-

EDUCATOR URGES P.T. A. TO ASSIST SCHOOL FINANCES

H. C. Minnich, retired dean of the school of education at Miami University, suggested to the Central High Parent-Teacher Association, in an address Monday afternoon in the school auditorium, that the P.T. A. become a social organization and aid the schools financially.

The educator declared that at present the schools are hampered by lack of sufficient funds and that the P.T. A. should sponsor entertainments and other affairs designed to raise funds for the purchase of school equipment that is badly needed.

Prof. Minnich also told the organization that a spirit of cooperation is desirable between the P.T. A. and the school teachers, asserting that the teachers are trained in a certain technique of work and should be allowed to go ahead with this work unmolested.

He also spoke of the fact that the schools in Europe have determined "almost beyond belief" in the last nineteen years. The speaker compared the schools abroad as he found them nineteen years ago citation is to familiarize itself with the schools and become personally acquainted with the teachers, he also said.

MAN DISCOVERS HIS IDENTITY AFTER AN ATTACK OF AMNESIA

BOWLING GREEN, O., Mar. 21.—Back in 1920 a delivery-man employed by a Pittsburgh express company suddenly quite signing delivery receipts with the name of "Orla Anderson" and started signing them "J. O. Meek."

Unable to explain why he was convinced that his name was Meek instead of Anderson when he was called before his employer, he was discharged.

And thus, it has been revealed, J. O. Meek was put on the road to discovering himself the victim of one of the strangest cases of amnesia yet told. The end of the tale at last appears near.

Since that day Meek has found that he served in the U. S. Marines during the war, that he had been married, and that soon after the wedding he and his bride settled on a homestead near Robinson, Ore., he had disappeared and had been given up by all his kin as the victim of murderers.

The fact that he had married a young widow, Mrs. Rose Rutherford, at New Kensington, Pa., after he suffered a loss of memory would have proved an embarrassing circumstance in the unwinding of the tale of his amnesia but for the fact that the bride of his youth also had remarried.

What gave him the clue that his real name was Meek has not yet been learned. If that can be determined, the story will be cleared up in most principal details.

The revelation about his past came after he decided to submit his finger prints to army officials to learn whether he might have served in the war and suffered injuries that caused his condition.

Word came back that his prints had been found in the Navy files. He was skeptical—he was sure he had never been in the navy. Later it was found that he had instead enlisted in the Marines under the name of Joseph Antropot, from Trinidad, Colorado.

Writing to Colorado in an effort to trace the clue, he found that a child who was named Jo Meek was born in Trinidad in Las Animas County, on Nov. 25, 1891, the birth date given by "Joseph Antropot" when he joined the Marines.

THINKS LINDBERGH BABY'S DOUBLE IS HERS

Billy Robert Reed, above, the baby whom police mistook for the kidnapped Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., when found with two intermarital couples at Crossville, Tenn., is believed by Mrs. Virginia Hasbagen, also above, of Kalamazoo, Mich., to be her son. She declares her boy disappeared during a trip through the south last fall. Billy bears a close resemblance to the Lindbergh child and also to the Hashagen baby. But officials believe there is merely a resemblance to both.
